H. L. NELSON BELIEVES IN LIFE INSURANCE AS SAVINGS BANK

H. L. Nelson, one of the enthusiastic members of the Utah Life Underwriters association, has been connected with the New York Life Insurance company for a number of years. He was president of the northwestern department of the $100,000 club of the company for two years and is now a member of the $200,000 club, having gained the distinction by his ability as a life insurance underwriter. Mr. Nelson is a native of Utah and a graduate of the State university.

Mr. Nelson is thoroughly imbued with the idea that life insurance should be a savings bank. On this point he says: "The ordinary young man has little appreciation of the value of money or of the necessity of saving it. It is, in fact, a difficult thing to do, and many young men who have good salaries from which they might save large amounts, save nothing because they fritter it away in various ways, since they see at the time no necessity for saving it. But when they take out a policy they are compelled, in a measure, to save the premiums or forfeit the policy, and they go on saving until the maturity of the policy, when they have probably attained years and experience sufficient to warrant them in making an investment with the money they receive at the expiration of their contract."

Mr. Nelson said that $176,000.00 was paid last year by American life insurance companies in matured policies and death claims, and commented on the fact that the amount of money involved
